INTRODUCTION

Ukraine has undergone the process of post-Communist transformation since 24 August, 1991 – the date of the Declaration of Independence of Ukraine. The very term transformation implies both overcoming the legacy of Communism, and co-existence of its elements with newly born basics of an open, democratic society. History and historical memory could serve as the most significant example of this. In the second half of the 1980s the Ukrainian history was turned into a battlefield between the national-democratic movement and the Communist nomenklatura. The democratic intelligentsia, public activists and politicians from the national-democratic camp have concentrated their efforts on revelations of the crimes of totalitarianism doing their best to discredit the Communist regime. The social and political meaning of that Soviet past has been actualized in the present: it has been used quite straightforwardly in political infighting.

In the 1990s public discussions over the ‘totalitarian past’ were greatly influenced by the current political agenda, i.e. with the struggle between ‘left’ and ‘right’, between communists and their allies from one side, and nationalists from another. Nationalists and national-democrats demanded a ‘trial over Communism’, a ‘new Nuremberg’, and lustrations. However, the society at whole was not responsive to these appeals mostly due to a bitter economic and social crisis which lasted for a decade. Ukraine, like the majority of other post-Soviet states did not pass through so called ‘de-Communization’. Nevertheless, due to the continuous struggle over historical memory, the Soviet period of the Ukrainian past has been actualized in public consciousness and has become one of the most controversial parts of the state politics of memory and of public debates. In the course of re-evaluating the Soviet past (the last term was equated to the totalitarianism) a set of topics of paramount significance was finalized: the Ukrainian revolution of 1917 – 1921, Stalinism in Ukraine (1920s – beginning of 1950s, with heavy emphasis on repressions, purges and assimilation), Great Famine of 1932-1933, nationalist movement of 1930s – 1950s (Organization of Ukrainian Nationalists), the history of the nationalist guerilla of 1940s – 50s (Ukrainian Insurgent Army, Ukrainian acronym - UPA), the intellectual dissent of 1950s – 70s.

The debates of these themes were often interpreted in exclusively national terms and were supported by institutions of state leadership, nationally inclined intellectuals and historians (as well as their opponents) in order to create an essentialized, heroic or victimized historical image of the national self. This image served different legitimizing and political aims of the state, its leadership and those who created that images and symbols in order to strengthen their own position in the post-Soviet society. For this reason the anti-Soviet struggle of nationalist Ukrainian movement in the 1940s-1950s is one of the most dominant topics of the Soviet past, a fact, which is mirrored also in the field of interest of associations, institutes or web sites presented in that Vademecum.

It is widely believed both by the majority of professional historians and the public in Ukraine that the 'true' interpretation and presentation of topics listed above will help society to liberate itself from the legacy of totalitarianism that in turn will lead to the better future. According to this conventional wisdom, the 'true' history can be found in the archival documents, particularly in those that were classified for decades for ideological reasons. For a decade the Ukrainian archives have been overcrowded with professional researchers, amateurs, journalists, private persons. They were accompanied by a number of foreign scholars. There were also particular practical reasons for private persons: victims of political repressions and their relatives obtained the right to access related files. In the end of 1990s thousands of Ostarbeiter looked for their personal files to prove their status since Germany has started to pay compensation to them.

As a result the archives were pressed to exercise more openness and sensitivity to the public demand. A number of access limitations were abolished, thousands of files declassified. Archives of enforcing agencies (Ministry of Interior, Security Service of Ukraine) were opened for researchers and interested public. However, new problems emerged: the majority of archives was (and still are) not equipped technically to meet growing demand in information, their database as a rule is organized in truly archaic manner, the access rules and regulations in many cases can be treated by the archival staff in a very arbitrary manner.

Growing interest in the past, particularly in the 'totalitarian period', continuous discussions over 'hot topics' of Ukrainian history in the 1990s and beginning of 2000s have provoked an emergence of new institutions dealing with the past, particularly with the Soviet period. Public demand for 'true history' and for openness has led to establishment of non-governmental institutions: libraries, research centers (like Ukrainian Center for Holocaust Studies), societies (like Memorial), museums. Many of them have established themselves as resource and research centers. Recently (May, 2006), the Ukrainian Government following practices of neighboring countries in Easter Europe (Poland, Slovakia) has established the Institute of National Memory (INM). The Institute belongs to the structures of executive power, it is expected that the INM will promote the state (official) line in establishing and promoting the politics of memory.

Due to the variety of different institutions and bodies dealing with contemporary history it will be useful to be informed about distinctions between them. State institutions (archives, libraries, research institutions) as a rule are not ideologically oriented/preoccupied (with exceptions caused by possible personal inclinations of the staff). Public and private collections might be based on certain ideological conception. For instance, institutions, collections, WEB resources specialized on the history of national-liberation movement focus primarily on promoting a national agenda and a 'heroic' or 'victimized' version of Ukrainian history. Collections of the Security Service of Ukraine or of the Ministry of Interior contain materials about repressions and persecutions mostly. Access to personal files in these archives are strictly limited.

The Vademecum Ukraine lists the most important central and regional institutions dealing with contemporary (primarily Soviet) history of Ukraine. Not all state archives and private documentary collections, NGOs and other institutions are listed in this book. The same applies to other possible sources of information (newspapers, journals, WEB sites) which also present information on different aspects of memory and rethinking of the Soviet past.

It is also worth mentioning that a number of Ukraine related materials dealing with the Soviet past are concentrated beyond the country. For instance, a good deal of documents can be found in Russian state archives (mostly in Moscow) as well as in other countries (USA, Canada, Germany, Poland, Czech Republic). For this reason they are not included into the Vademecum as Ukrainian institutions. The Vademecum focuses almost exclusively on Ukraine. However, the information of some very important research institutions and national (scientific) associations from abroad whose work is concentrated on Ukrainian issues/modern/contemporary history of Ukraine is included.

Finalizing our introductory remarks we would like to provide future users with some practical information and contextual instructions about using the Ukrainian archives.

General provisions and regulations for access and use of archival documents in Ukraine are described in the 'Regulations for the Use of Documents of the National Archival Fond of Ukraine, which belong to the state and territorial communities. The Regulations were approved by a Decree of the SAC – the State Archival Committee of Ukraine (Derzhavnyj Komitet Archiviv Ukrainy)¹. They can be found at <http://www.archives.gov.ua/Eng/Law-base/Legislations2003.php#13>

According to the 'Regulations...' foreigners and persons without citizenship staying legally in Ukraine enjoy the same rights of access to national archival fonds and have the same duties while using them as citizens of Ukraine.

Formally there is no difference in personal status of the visitor. However, private persons and representatives of an institution could be considered differently: formal affiliation with a state or public institution provided with a formal letter of support (recommendation) is generally considered with more respect (and following assistance). Formal letters from foreign institutions preferably should be supplied with translation in Ukrainian (or Russian).

Visitors should be ready to follow several simple procedures which are described below.

Users (readers) who attend any state archival institution should proceed to the person authorized to issue an entrance permit. Usually it is a director or deputy director of the archive.

Visitors will be asked to present their ID (passport is of premium importance and acceptance) and to explain the purpose of the visit, or to present a letter of support/intent. Visitors are also asked to sign the special consent form after reading the archive's rules and regulations.

After getting the permit the visitor should proceed to the reading room (all state archives are equipped with special premises for visitors) and present the permit to the person in service.

The majority of Ukrainian archives have detailed inventories, card catalogues/indexes which can be used for initial research. It is also might be of help to address the archival consultant for advice and guidance.

To order documents the visitor will be asked to fill a form – as a rule the orders are fulfilled on next day (the term should not exceed 2 days). Every file provided to the visitor, is supplied with a special registration form, which must be filled by the visitor (normally – the date of use, topic of research and the signature of user).

Users can keep files, documents and inventories in their disposal from 5 to 10 days depending on the status of the document. The visitor should put the signature for every document in the order form upon return.

According to the current Ukrainian legislation access to certain fonds, collections and documents can be limited or restricted. The legislation stipulates 'temporary' restrictions in the following cases:

- a) the requested documents at the moment are under processing (newly arrived or declassified) or under restoration (old documents)
- b) the requested documents are classified for the reasons of national security (state secret) or for protection of personal rights and interests of citizens (the use of information may be considered as harmful for certain person)
- c) the access to the documents is restricted due to the requirements of institutions, organizations and private persons who handed these documents to the state archive for storage

Generally the staff at Ukrainian archives prefers to assist visitors fully in their requests. However, according to the common practices the restrictions described above can be applied with a good share of arbitrariness. So called departmental (internal) archives can apply their own instructions and regulations that could lead to certain, sometimes considerable limitations in access to the documents. For instance, archives of the Ministry of Interior, Security Service of Ukraine (SBU), General Prosecutors Office are often considered as 'closed' institutions. However, some of them demonstrate more openness to the public. For instance in the last few years the SBU archive takes active part in promoting the anti-totalitarian agenda in the politics of memory (documentary exhibitions, publications) which can be explained by the role of professional historians entering the SBU archive staff.

We appreciate the efforts of the Bundesstiftung zur Aufarbeitung der SED-Diktatur in promoting extended knowledge and information about East-European history. The Vademecum Ukraine is a part of this effort. We hope that it will be of use for those who start research of contemporary Ukrainian history, particularly in the research of the Ukrainian Soviet past. We will greatly appreciate any comments and further additions to this publication in hope of it's further improvement.

Fonds: 73 fonds, 271,486 files (1918–99), 41 items of cinema documents.

The SBU State Archives Department was established on 1994 by the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine on the basis of archival records made in the course of work by state security authorities in the former Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and modern-day Ukrainian security authorities. The DA SBU is composed of the following divisions: Division for Archival Records Acquisition and Logistical Support; Research Division; Division for Information and Use of Records; Temporary-Storage Archives of SBU regional offices.

Including the records of regional SBU offices, there are over 930 000 documents in DA SBU's keeping. The archive preserves documents of KDB All-Ukrainian Extraordinary Commission (VUNK, Vseukrains'ka nadzvychna komisii) of the Ukrainian SSR (VUNK-KDB) from the period of 1918–91 (documents of supreme governing body of VUNK-KDB, report records, surveys, special reports, criminal cases); documents concerning Ukrainian political parties of the Ukrainian Revolution, public, cultural and other organizations, namely: Ukrainian Social-Democratic Workers' Party (Ukrains'ka sotsial-demokratychna robotnycha partiia), Ukrainian Party of Socialist Revolutionaries (Ukrains'ka partiia sotsialistiv-revoliutsioneriv), Ukrainian Communist Party, anti-fascist organization Moloda Hvardiia, Prosvita society; documents about activity of foreign intelligence related to Ukraine of the 1920s – 30s.

HDA SBU also contains documents from the period of German-Soviet War of 1941–1945 and documents about the war of state security bodies of the USSR against OUN-UPA in 1939–1953. The array of postwar documents keeps information about political repressions, counter-intelligence activities and anti-smuggling operations.

The filed documents of the DA SBU directly related to the Vademecum topic can be divided to the following groups:

- the national statehood, political parties, and the Ukrainian insurgent movement in times of the national and democratic revolution between 1917 and 1921;
- dismissed criminal cases against prominent figures of Ukrainian culture, humanities, science, politics and revolutionary movement. In particular, biography and criminal case of M. Hrushevksy, the voluminous cases of court proceedings against the so called "Ukraine's Liberation Union" (Spilka Vyzvolenia Ukrayiny), "Ukrainian National Center" (Ukrayinsky Natsionalny Tsentr), and the "Spring" (Vesna) case against the repressed representatives of prerevolutionary corps of military officers and generals, etc.;
- documents on the participation of security agents in WWII, in particular materials on action groups that operated behind the enemy's lines, partisan units, etc. The section contains materials of criminal cases against individuals that were uncovered by state security authorities and criminally charged for committing military crimes and spying;

- original documents of the OUN-UPA (Organization of the Ukrainian Nationalists - Ukrainian Insurgent Army) anti-Soviet resistance movement in the forties and sixties; and
- materials about religious movements in Ukraine.

The collection of the reference sources includes:

- section shelf catalogues, historic reference materials by each section;
- systemic catalogue card-indices by subject and topic of documents issued by the VUChK-KDB (All-Ukrainian Extraordinary Commission - State Security Committee) and separately for documents prepared by the SNBU-SBU (National Security Service of Ukraine - Security Service of Ukraine);
- an alphabetical special card-index for the section of dismissed criminal cases; and
- an alphabetical card-index of state security officers' personal files.

Catalogues: classed, subject, nominal, and card index.

Computerised database: The Lists of the Persecuted Citizens (6,000 records).

The cemetery consists of the graves of the famous figures of culture, arts, and sciences, and political elite of the Western Ukraine. There are 11 documented memorial places of burials, among which the memorial to Ukrainian Galician Army soldiers, Polish military burials of 1918–19, etc. The cemetery contains about 500 sculptures and gravestones which are of great art value. The victims of NKVS repressions are buried in common grave of the sector # 82 of the cemetery.

Museum of History of the St. Michael's Golden-Domed Monastery

03001, Kyiv
Tr'iohsviatytels'ka St., 6-8.

Tel.: ++380-228 6 268

Head: Selivachova Natalia Fedorivna

The church complex on Mykhailovs'ka ploshcha in Kyiv, situated in the opposite of the Sophia Cathedral, was originally built in 1108 and presents one of the biggest monasteries of medieval Kyivan Rus'. The monastery was destroyed 1934-1937 by the Soviet regime in order to build a Soviet huge government center in the old city in Kyiv which became the capital of Soviet Ukraine in 1934.

The museum of the St. Michaels Monastery, located in the bell tower, shows photographs and documents on the destruction of the monastery's complex as well as of its reconstruction in 1997-2000 by the Ukrainian state leadership. In Ukrainian national memory the reconstruction of the monastery symbolizes the return of national cultural heritage repressed by Soviet power. Together with the monument to the victims of the Great Famine (Holodomor) 1932/1932 in the USSR near to the main entrance of the bell tower the area around the St. Michael's monastery presents one of the most important places of memory of the totalitarian past in Ukraine.

REGIONAL MUSEUMS

The following rubric presents museums of history of different regions of Ukraine as well as memorial museums dedicated to events which are important for the remembrance of the Soviet past (e.g. battles of the Second World War which became key events of the Soviet myth of the "Great Fatherland's War"). A third group of museums of different regions of Ukraine is dedicated to the memory of famous cultural workers of Soviet Ukraine (the writers P. Tychyna, M. Ryl's'kyi, O. Honchar, the writer and cultural functionary M. Bazhan, the diaspora-writer Ulas Samchuk, the film directors O. Dovzhenko and I. Kavaleridze, the avantgarde theatre director L. Kurbas, the pedagogue V. Sukhomlyns'kyi and the sculptor I. Honchari); Ukrainian dissidents in the USSR (the poet V. Stus and the literary critic V. Cornovil, who became in the Perestroika the leader of Ukrainian national movement "Ruch"); representatives of the Ukrainian nationalist and anti-Soviet underground organizations OUN and UPA (the leaders of OUN Y. Konovalts and S. Bandera, the UPA commander in chief R. Shukhevych); outstanding historians and representatives of Ukrainian historical and political thought (M. Hrushevs'kyi and V. Lypyns'kyi); Soviet revolutionaries who participated in the Civil War (1917–1921) and fought for the establishment of the Soviet power in Ukraine (the Soviet revolutioner O. Parkhomenko and the Bolshevik military activist M. Shchors who both became a part of Soviet (Soviet Ukrainian) Pantheon of revolution heroes, P. Anhelina, organizer of the first women tractor brigade in USSR and prominent symbol of communist propagand); Soviet heroes of the "Great Fatherlands War" or the anti-fascist resistance movement in Europe (Soviet General Vatutine or the participant of the French resistance movement and Heroe of Soviet Union and France V. Poryk).
